icle yesterday, we think we can safely say man may be suspected of having committed, be is entitled to fair play, and consultation with counsel; nor should be be kept in prison for a week without a warrant of commitment, tting forth the nature of the offence charged against him. The Republican party is opposed to Star-Chamber proceedings of every sort; and those who commit them, in its name, do so on their own responsibility, and not with the sanction of the party. It is a duty that Capi. Yates owes to himself, and the public, to cl up these serious allegations against his official conduct, and either disprove them, or show cir-

Now, what does this state of facts show? Simply that Capit. Yates arrested two innocent men and harried them into a felou's cell, upon his more suspicion that they had been guilty of a murder, and deprived them, during four days, of all their rights as citizens, and actually kept them in coofficensed some eight days trying to find evidence of their guilt, when such evidence, if it existed, defied even his ckill and experience to get possession of it.

The other complaint against Capi. Yates in the manner of the arrest of Mr. Little and his two sons. On the 7th inst. they were arrested upon a charge of larceny, and confined in a cell in the Watch House. Pinkerton & Co., of the Northwestern Po. lice Agency of this city. We have been looking, with some degree of curiosity for the sequel. We will first briefly recapitulate the facts and incidents of the murder: On the last day of December, 1865, William Hull and a Frenchman, named Jules De Coilier, arrived at Hamiltol, Mo., and put up at

On arriving there he learned that the commission of Inula, and that dotained a commission of Inuncy, and that the examination under II, was then progressing before the Judge of the Probate Court. On Hull's lawyers being informed of the issuing of the warrant by the Governor, they telegraphed to Columbus, and in a few hours a despatch was received from his Excellency, revoking the warrant. In explanation of this course, he wrote to the agent, named in the Requisition, that before he had come on for Hull, the question of Hull's sanity had been raised, and that he had promised to issue an warrant until that question was disposed of. The agent of course, acquisesed in an arrangement, which he had no power to resist, and patiently awaited the result of the investigation. Hull was declared insure, not at the time of his being arrested, but insure at the commission of lauscy. The Court ordered Hull to be sent to the State Laustic Asylams at Columbus, and for a time he excansiate Asylams at Columbus, and for a time he excansiate Asylams at Columbus, and for a time he excansiate Asylams at Columbus, and for a time he cannot be suffer had been fragotten by most; not so with Pinkerton & Co. Dr. Stringfellow says that, as a man, he feels bound to recognize J.m Lane, and to treat him courteously, while, as a politician, he scorns and leather him.

Here is a distinction, but hardly a difference. It doesn't make much matter, however, what Dr. Stringfellow says or think at present, as he has announced to the world that he has given up all hope of making Kanssa a Slave State, and is going in for making money.

It would have amused you not a little to hear and it going in for making money.

The modern Sampson, so well known as the "Little Glant," makes his appearance in a seconssion of the most marvellous feets of strength and agility. Assisted by an Irishman and a slave, he holds up the enormous weight of the whole Union; twists in two with his fingers the strongest compact; demoisables with one blow of his sematorial tast the cidest ordinance; removes with one effect the deposed set land-marks; I caps when in full career through the plainest principles of the great decis action, as though they were paper hoops; and bends with ease the mightlest provisions of law or consticommandments at once if he tried; and if he had a mind to seize hold of the pillars of the government and bow himself, he would bring down the whole

Master Douglas also goes through a series of halancings, posturings and summersets on the Mispostare known as "Donglas delying the elergy," after the manner of Ajax delying the lightning. This part of the exhibition concludes with his incredible flying leap on to the democratic platform—a strangely put-together structure in the middle of the ring—where he hands bequare on both fret, with head up, and eyes fixed on the White House. To the Editor of the National Era:
I have not read the opinions of the Judges of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case at length yet, and do not know whether either of them alluded to a certain portion of the proceedings in the Convention that formed the Constitution of the United States. If they did not, I wish you would respectfully ask Mr, Chief Justice Taney, what he supposes the statesmen of that day meant by the words "other free citizens," when they adopted, in Committee of the Whole, the following resolution:

Committee of the Whole, the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the right of suffrage in the the crush. It has not done it, and it will not do it. The Resoldiesia is too base a truckler to valgar prejudices, too unprincipled in its op-position to or advocacy of any cause, to either respect the truth in others or to rely upon the truth for its own her vord and buckler. Here is its article upon six bridge; THE ROCK ISLAND BRIDGE,—No doubt exists in the minds of any that the Railroad H Gock Island is an intolerable unisance.

register of voters—as preliminary questions im-portant, undoubtedly, but deriving most of their consequence from their relation to this great and paramount question—the right of the prop's of Kansas to decide for themselves upon the Constitution which may be offered for their aloption. If this could be properly and satis-factorily adjusted, all the difficulties which now ome stale:

The bridge opened with navigation in the spring of 1856. Steamboats passed up and down without accident till the burning of the Rife Afton at the draw, resulting in the partial destruction of the bridge. The bridge was repaired, and again opened the 4th of August. Prom this time till the close of navigation, 187 steamers passed the bridge. Not one of them net with an accident. Of these weathers, 25 had fave barges in tow, and 35 had one barges Thus 55 of the steamers had barges in tow, and anoperous. In second or properly adjusted, all the difficulties which now embarrass the seitlement of the Territory would disappear. Governor Walker said it had been his fortune to be engaged in various positions and departments of the public service, but he had never entered upon any duties which seemed to him of more vital importance than those connected with his present office. He entered upon their discharge with a sincers and carnest desire to contribute something to the welfare of the Territory, and to the peace and stability of our common Union. If he could accomplish this, he should feel abundantly repaid for any labor or anxiety which the responsibilities resting upon him might involve. He submitted these remarks, after a long day's latiguing journey, without the alightest expec fillingues to make known the views and sements with which he should enter upon the since the highly educated daughter of a wealth Connecticut gentleman, slipped quietly down to Brooklyn, and who privately married to a lov-lag and worthy ship carpenter living in the same town with herack. They kept the mar riage a dead secret from the old folks, to pre-visat a bousehold "row," and the husband fre-quently called on his wife until ordered off by the wife, as an unaccepted, lower. Soon after the the wile, as an unaccepted, lover. Soon after the parents observed a change in their daughter, and subsequent investigations caused the old man to visit the shipwright and demand his marriage to the young woman, in order to save the family from disgrace; and after a flat refusal at first, and a subsequent acquiesence on condition that $12,000 were placed in the bank to his (the young man's) account, the old marriage cirtificate was produced and the loying couple are now enjoying their regular honeymoon with the full consent of all concerned.

23 The new Archbishop of Paris has taken the mean oath of office in the Tulleries. At the clid of the ceremonial, the Emperor, unexpectedly, threw himself on his knees, before the eminent Cardinal, and solicited his first benediction. The Empress and the Prince Imperial were favored likewise, with an affectionate blessing. Napoleon has completed his fiftieth year, and testifies some religious sentiment.

He declared himself devoted to the Union— lighting that upon its preservation result is hopen not of this country alone, but of a world, for popular treedom—and said he way perfoundly auxious to remove everything whi threatens its peace and menaces its existen The Kamsa question constituted, in his jud-ment, the most threatening of the peris-which it had ever been threatened; and hoped that, if this could be fairly and satisfthis feeling which had mouree and this appointment, and he was prepared to agon its duties in the spirit of peace and mony which their proper discharge undoubtedly demand. He was prepare control to a tiempt in petitement of the spirit of peace and the spirit of the sp ritery, and of the Constitution of the United States—principles that had received the sanction of that angust tribunal, the Supress Court of the United States—namely, that it belonged to the people of Kanisa to decide for Thémesives what their demestic institutions should be. He recognized to the fullest extent and justice of these principles. He believed them to be the only principles upon which the institutions of any State could be fairly and finally established. He believed that neither Massachusetts, Connecticut nor Missouris had any more right to say what the institutions of Kansas had to say what the institutions of Kansas had to say what the institutions of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Missouris should be. It was eatirely swrong and Missouris should be. It was eatirely swrong and
